

Educating for Life Today and Tomorrow

Resource Manual for High School Guidance

All Canadian provinces have added or increased their focus on personal and career development as part of the high-school programs, seeking to guide students in the way they should live in this society, and especially to help them plan for "a life-long journey that includes varied and changing work, family, and community roles". But these programs come with a particular philosophy that falls far short of our Christian school goals. All of the school's programs should point students beyond created things and creatures to the Creator. All learning should guide them in the Way of life that our Lord Jesus placed us in and in which He called us to live. Therefore guidance is an integral part of the total school's goals and programs, a framework for providing students with direction in the way they are called to live in every area of life.

The guidance program that is described in this manual from Christian Schools Canada provides a number of ways in which schools can guide students.
